INTRODUCTION

Brotherhood Decisions

Throughout our history much of the action has been out on the fringes (geographically) of our fellowship. The movement of members to new areas came to have a major impact on how we saw the world and how we understood God's purposes for us as a group of disciples committed to obedience. As families scattered, there was always the hazard of loss to the brotherhood. Not everyone chose to be a part of the Brethren in Christ church—a small fellowship which allowed for individuality, yet sought to maintain a brotherhood with a pilgrim mindset.

In its second century the Annual General Conference of the Brethren in Christ was characterized by concerns for faithfulness and obedience. To help tell an important part of the story of our quest for obedience, this 1978 MISSIONS YEARBOOK chronicles a century of adventure in Missions.

This Yearbook tells the story of missions from the perspective of the decisions made by the General Conference and the boards it created. The EVANGELICAL VISITOR and other historical writings tell the missions story from other more individualistic points of view.

Decisions affect destinies. The brotherhood, its families, and individual members are profoundly affected by the impact of Brethren in Christ Missions:

- Three of the candidates for regional bishop at the 1978 Conference have had major training and development as overseas missionaries.
- Of the more than 120 members of General Conference boards, committees and commissions (1977 Directory), half either have served in a mission or service assignment or have had the impact of a near relative who did so.
- More than 30 deacons on the current active list are in a similar category.
- Five graduates at Messiah College in 1978 (two of them, magna cum laude) were brought up on Brethren in Christ mission fields overseas.

Inherent in missions is the mandate to go. When an obedient disciple goes, frequently he/she meets the person he/she marries and they together bring into the world a new generation. The heredity, environment, and social history of missionary children (MKs) are fashioned out of a church's commitment to obedience to the Great Commission. This highlights the impact of decisions made by the General Conference.

The decisions a General Conference makes about faith and life and mission either turn our people toward the LIGHT (I John 1:7), or cast a long darkening shadow on the future—of ourselves, our children and many who need to hear the GOOD NEWS. The record of the decisions we have made in the past may aid us as we come to decision time again at the General Conference of 1978.

The Missions Story

A Brotherhood Responds to the Great Commission – 1870s

When General Conference met at the home of John Mohler in Ohio in 1871, they decided "that the Districts throughout the Church shall instruct their respective deacons to collect money by voluntary contributions in their Districts, for a general Missionary Fund, to remain unappropriated" until the conference of 1872. That year they met at the home of Samuel Page (Dauphin County, PA) and decided that "a Mission Board be appointed, consisting of one member in each District, to take charge of the spread of the Gospel in localities heretofore unacquainted with the doctrine as taught by the church."

The brethren intended to spread the Gospel as they knew it. When they met at the home of Michael Musser (Lancaster County, PA) in 1873, they decided that the "Board of Missions be continued and that the ministering brethren be encouraged to go out into the various sections to preach the Gospel." They made provision for funds collected throughout the church to be sent to Brother Levi Graybill, treasurer at Orville, Wayne County, Ohio.

The 1874 Resolutions

Meeting in the home of Joseph Bower, Carroll County, Illinois, in 1874, a major action of that General Conference was to adopt an article containing 10 resolutions on Missions:

1. That the action of the Conference of 1871, on the Mission question, covers sufficient ground for the Missions Fund to be based upon.
2. Those ministers sent out by the Church to preach the Gospel shall be considered Missionaries.
3. That General Conference annually select ten or twelve properly qualified ministers from the several Districts throughout the Church, from which number the Mission Board may draw as occasion may require for the ensuing year.
4. That the Missionaries chosen may exercise their own judgment as to the length of time to labor in any locality.
5. That a committee of three shall constitute a Mission Board, to be appointed by General Conference, whose duty it shall be to receive calls from all sections where missionary labor is required.
6. That if calls should be made attended by circumstances, the nature of which they cannot fully comprehend, they shall first correspond with the informant, and if they find everything satisfactory, they shall make arrangements to fill the call.
7. That it shall be the duty of the Board to make an annual report to General Conference of all its transactions concerning mission work.
8. That it shall be the duty of Deacons of the several Districts to collect money for mission purposes at least once a year, and ministers shall give their aid and influence, as may be necessary. All money collected shall be sent to the Treasurer, Brother Levi Graybill, Orville, Wayne County, Ohio, to be deposited in bank at interest, subject to draft by said Mission Board.
9. That the Mission Fund shall be appropriated to no other than to mission purposes and shall be subject to the order of the Board.
10. The following Brethren are appointed a Board of Missions, namely, Brother Abraham Stoner, Greenstown, Ohio; Jacob E. Stauffer, Canton, Ohio; Jos. Davidson, Martinsburg, Ohio.

With those important foundation decisions made, it is not surprising that the subject of the publication of a church paper was postponed for consideration and action of a later General Conference. (It took 13 years for that.)

A number of interesting things are noted:

- a. They looked to responsible leaders of the church to go with the Gospel and to promote missions.
- b. The deacons were involved in giving everyone a chance to become involved in missions, maintaining the principle of free will giving.
- c. All of the Board appointed in 1874 was from Ohio—with none from Pennsylvania.

In 1877, Conference decided that ministering brethren be sent to visit the (Russian) Mennonites in the far West and to visit the scattered members throughout the State of Kansas and, if necessary, elect ministers and deacons.

The following year Conference decided that missionary brethren Joseph Hershey and Henry Leshner be sent to Kansas.

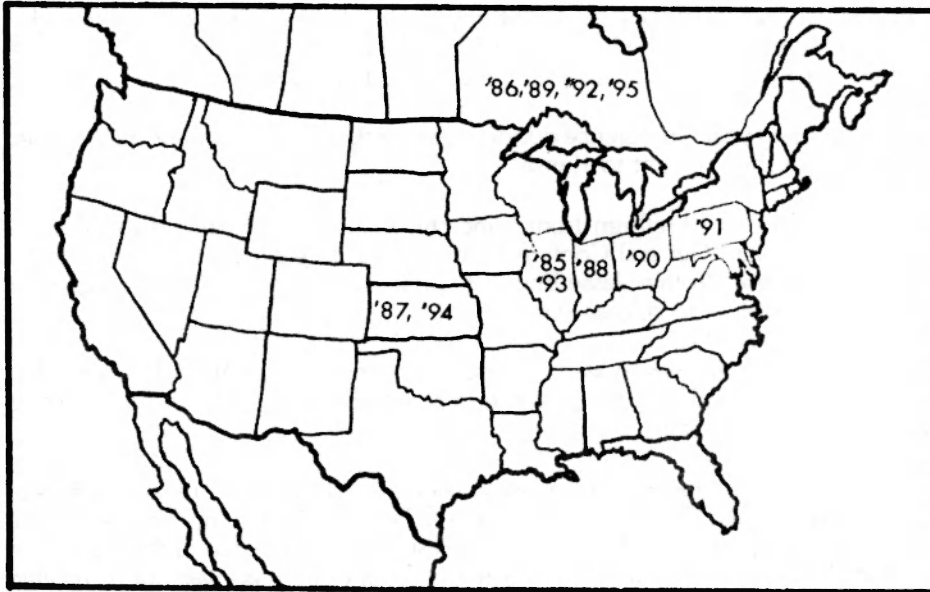

Since a colony of brethren from Lancaster County, PA intended to locate in Kansas, they asked General Conference to choose an elder to accompany them. Conference chose Brother Jesse Engle of Cumberland County, PA and urged the church in his district to release him.

Thus the man who was to lead the first pioneering party to Africa 19 years later, already a trusted leader, got experience in responding to a call, pulling up stakes and moving to a frontier community.

In 1884 Conference agreed to raise $3,000 to assist certain Russian families to emigrate to America. This money, if not raised by voluntary contributions within the conference year, was to be borrowed by a designated committee of three brethren (all from Kansas). It appears by a later minute that this project was not completed successfully.

Conference Meets on the Frontiers of the Brotherhood 1885 – 1895

As stated earlier, the concerns of the church were being dealt with out on the advanced positions where quite small scattered Brethren in Christ fellowships had formed. The accompanying map shows the location of General Conference for the 11-year period, 1885-1895. It seems significant that during this time of growing awareness within the brotherhood, the General Conference met in Pennsylvania only once.

WHERE GENERAL CONFERENCE MET 1885-1895

The 1880s showed signs of restless stirring. General Conference had made some sound decisions—but this people with a bent for obedience were disturbed about their response to the Scriptures as they understood them. This is illustrated in Article 8 of the 1886 Conference.

Have the church brethren carried into effect the commission of Matthew, 28th chapter, 19 and 20 verses?

Ans. They have not.

RESOLVED, That the church put forth more efforts to furnish men and means to carry out the commission.

The vision for ministry, both evangelistic and nurture, is reflected in these General Conference records:

1886—The Missions of Mosa and Brook in Canada shall be supplied with preaching at the option of the Mission Board of Canada.

1886—Elder Martin H. Oberholser, Franklin County, PA and Brother David Engle, Sr., Lancaster County, PA, were appointed a committee to adjust difficulties existing among members in Virginia and North Carolina.

1887—A request from Columbus Mission, Ohio, to relieve Brother Kunkle (an old minister) of an indebtedness of $642 was considered and “decided to raise the amount by voluntary contributions throughout the church. . .”

1887—Brethren appointed to investigate the condition of Indian Territory, reported very minutely the particulars of their visit showing the necessity of work among the Indians. The report was approved as follows:

Conference urges an effort for mission work in Indian Territory (later Oklahoma), and that a committee of three brethren be appointed for the purpose of ascertaining a locality and what would be necessary for support in mission work in Indian Territory and report to next General Conference.

*Comm: Elder Jesse Engle, brethren
S. E. Graybill and Abram Means.*

It seems that this committee did not accomplish its task. Two years later, in 1889, there is a brief notice that Conference deferred the Indian question until next General Conference. Although there has been some ministry among Native Americans on the part of individually concerned Brethren in Christ (as for example, Rev. John Nigh, in Ontario, Canada), General Conference let that challenge lay dormant until after World War II.

1888—Conference ordained brethren Noah Zook and T. A. Long as missionaries. They went into Michigan.

1889—Carland Mission (Michigan) appears on the agenda of General Conference with a request for help to build a house of worship. This continued to receive assistance from the brotherhood for quite a few years.

1890—A request from Iowa for visits during love feasts was referred to Elders Isaac Trump and Joseph Shirk, their traveling expenses to be paid out of the General Mission Fund.

1892—The Arizona Mission appears in 1892 with jurisdiction first under the Kansas Church, and then later the Upland, California Church. With the movement of people into California, the work was partly abandoned by 1906 and authorization was given to sell the property in 1908.

A New Beginning – Chicago Mission 1890

Looking back from this vantage point, a major breakwater in missions history was the decision of General Conference in 1890 to establish a mission in the city of Chicago. In this decision, the Brethren in Christ set the stage for a new agenda as its people discovered a new world where their Gospel was stiffly challenged but found to be completely trustworthy. Applying the biblical truths to people of totally different backgrounds brought to the church the first shock waves of questions for which their former answers were no longer altogether adequate. The workers moved cautiously, reporting what God was doing, but in time there was concern across the church when it was learned that musical instruments may have been used in services at the Chicago Mission.

General Conference was called on repeatedly during these years to reaffirm its position on certain practices—taking pictures (likenesses), musical instruments, trafficking in tobacco, alcohol, etc. In attempting to stand on principle, it reaffirmed its previous actions. In 1906 more than a dozen such actions by previous General Conferences are referred to. But the new world, away from the traditional simple lifestyle of rural Brethren in Christ, set in motion adaptations that would test the brotherhood at a host of points for half a century.

Active Role of Women

As the momentum for missions adventures grew, the gifts of women naturally emerged. We cite just a few:

- a. Rhoda Lee electrified the General Conference with an impassioned plea for a response to the spiritual needs of people overseas, in a lost world.
- b. While a couple was assigned to lead the new mission in Chicago, it soon became a program fashioned by the leadership gifts of Sarah Bert from Kansas.
- c. It was a highly educated woman, H. Frances Davidson, who was the first person to respond for overseas service to the newly created Foreign Mission Board.
- d. Women were commissioned alongside their husbands for service as evangelists across the brotherhood.
- e. By action of the 1907 General Conference, women were appointed to the Home Mission Board.

The Brethren in Christ and Africa

Probably more persons in the Brethren in Christ Church in the 1970s have been influenced directly or indirectly by the church's overseas missionary effort than by any one other church endeavor. (The one exception—continued concern for obedience to the Word of God as understood by the brethren.) Validity of this claim can be weighed by exploring (1) how Brethren in Christ missions in Africa affected the movements of people; (2) who married whom; (3) how the church accepted the need for training schools; (4) the articles people read in their homes, especially the EVANGELICAL VISITOR; and (5) their perception of the unevangelized world and their responsibility for it. To test this thesis will be a valid area for some future missionary's research.

It was at Bethel, Kansas in May 1894 that Conference was confronted with the still-waiting challenge of obedience to Jesus' instruction that we shall be witnesses to the uttermost parts of the earth (Acts 1:8). Among those present was Brother J. E. Stauffer. Having heard the paper read by Mrs. Rhoda Lee and noting the inaction of the Conference body, he arose and placed a five-dollar bill on the conference table, stating that it was for foreign mission work, then sat down (Ref. pp. 20-21, SOUTH & SOUTH CENTRAL AFRICA, Davidson). Stauffer's action was in line with a disciple's response to the teaching of James 4:17. This act triggered a response from General Conference which led to

- (a) his being named the Foreign Missionary treasurer;
- (b) the growth of the Fund to $35 by the end of that last day of the 1894 General Conference;
- (c) the creation of a Foreign Missionary Board at the 1895 Conference held at Nottawasaga, Ontario, Canada;
- (d) the growth of the fund by the 1896 Conference (at Greencastle, PA) to $419.60.

It seemed time to move forward—General Conference increased the Board to 12 representative members, with an "operating board" of three: Henry Davidson, chairman; Jesse Engle, secretary; and Samuel Zook.

This operating board was authorized to receive applications with the understanding that a field would not be chosen until workers are selected who "are believed to be called of God." An appeal letter in the January 15, 1897 EVANGELICAL

VISITOR mentioned two fields that had been brought to the attention of the committee—South Africa and South or Central America.

The Holy Spirit led four persons to offer themselves to the Board by the time of the 1897 General Conference in Stark County, Ohio. H. Frances Davidson, daughter of board chairman Henry Davidson, was the first applicant. She was followed by Elder Jesse Engle, respected church leader and secretary of the Operating Foreign Mission Board. His wife, Elizabeth Engle, and Alice Heise were the other two. These four were accepted and an appeal went out for a fifth person, a man to assist Brother Engle. By the time the party gathered in the Messiah Home Chapel, Harrisburg, PA on November 21, 1897 for a farewell and ordination meeting, they had grown to five with the fifth Kansas recruit, Miss Barbara Hershey. A decision had been made that the field would be South Africa, but the party in its first sea voyage to England then on to Capetown, South Africa was on a journey into the unknown. A series of decisions had to be made following the strenuous, though reliable, (1) process of gathering information, (2) counseling and (3) prayer. Following that process, the first Brethren in Christ mission on foreign soil was established in the Matopo Hills, 1300 miles inland in July 1898. (The drama attending the establishment of Matopo Mission has been told elsewhere.)

JESSE ENGLE AND DONKEY TEAM—MATOPO MISSION

With the launching of foreign missions, the sending church had to delegate to the Foreign Mission Board the power to act decisively on important matters in the interim between General Conferences. The ultimate responsibility remained the same but from that time forward many of the tactical decisions were made and reported on to Conference later. Decisions were many, and unprecedented:

- (a) How shall evangelization be accomplished?
- (b) What about schools? What shall be taught when they are established?
- (c) What standards shall be set for converts to be accepted into church membership?
- (d) How shall decisions regarding expanding the work be made?
- (e) What clearance was needed from the sending board for new moves?
- (f) How can the health of the missionary be preserved?

Only a terse account of the African mission work in its first decade is possible.

- . . . the Lord prospered their labors and there was an early harvest of converts.
- . . . the founding leader had laid a foundation for an African Church in what is today known as Rhodesia when in less than two years he succumbed to fever and died on April 3, 1900.
- . . . new missionaries came from America to fill in the ranks and attempt new ventures for Christ.
- . . . in addition to Matopo Mission, some of the early missionaries worked in other places in South Central Africa—Johannesburg, Cinderella Mission, Cape Town, Mandamabge Mission, Mapane Mission, Mtshabezi Mission and Macha Mission, four hundred miles north in what is today Zambia.
- . . . the work grew through the medium of schools. The training program was a keystone in the plan to prepare Christian leaders for the coming church.
- . . . H. Frances Davidson, during her first furlough (1904-05), did much to capture the imagination of the home church, both through her presentation at General Conference and in contacts across the church.

SOUTH AND SOUTH CENTRAL AFRICA

In addition to the mission stations mentioned in the text during the first ten years, further developments in Africa included the following locations: SOUTHERN RHODESIA—Wanezi (1924), Phumula (the Gwaii) (1955), Bulawayo (1956). NORTHERN RHODESIA—Sikalongo (1920) and Nahumba (Choma) (1954).

Carrying Good News to American Cities

While the church was learning about new things in far away places overseas, another vision was growing—to take the message of life to the major cities known to our people. It was awareness of Chicago that caused them to go there with the obvious blessing of the Lord. For similar reasons they went to Philadelphia, PA; Harrisburg, PA; Buffalo, NY; Des Moines, IA, and a few years later to Toronto, Ont.; San Francisco, CA, and Dayton, OH. The winds of the Spirit accompanied these efforts and the home church was caught up in a whole new agenda at General Conference. In 1904 a Home Mission Board was appointed, carrying on the duties of the earlier General Mission Board to coordinate these efforts.

The burst of activity in Missions coincided with the continuing work of General Conference on a position statement on the doctrine of sanctification. While considerable tensions accompanied this issue in local districts, General Conference attempted to steer a steady course for the brotherhood. It was slow to legislate but prepared a major doctrinal statement which was published along with an index of Conference actions up to 1904.

The newly established missions soon upset the traditional patterns for selection of leadership. With people more exposed to external challenges, the “call of God” became more personalized and the church had to develop ways of examining volunteers.

Problems of several types became more common on General Conference agendas relating to leadership problems and the handling of funds. Decision-making in established districts by deliberate group process frequently could not be duplicated in places like Philadelphia and Des Moines. In certain cases the Home Mission Board turned to the General Executive Board to handle special problems.

The missions vision in North America did not only see big cities. The new migration to California saw Upland as a place for growth of the church. Conference also sent workers to Wachaprague, VA in 1904 and to Northwestern Canada in 1906.

Other places appearing in the Conference record during this period include: Wabash, IN—1908; Goodman, MO—1909; Blackwell, OK—1910; Carthage, MO—1911; Filer, ID—1911. The 1913 Conference minute reports on projections for the Jabbok Missionary Training Home in Oklahoma.

THE CHURCH GOES TO THE BIG CITIES

The dots show location of church concentrations. Note seven cities as follows: (1) Chicago. (2) Des Moines (1897). (3) Harrisburg. (4) Philadelphia (1899). (5) Buffalo (1899). (6) Toronto (1909). (7) San Francisco (1911).

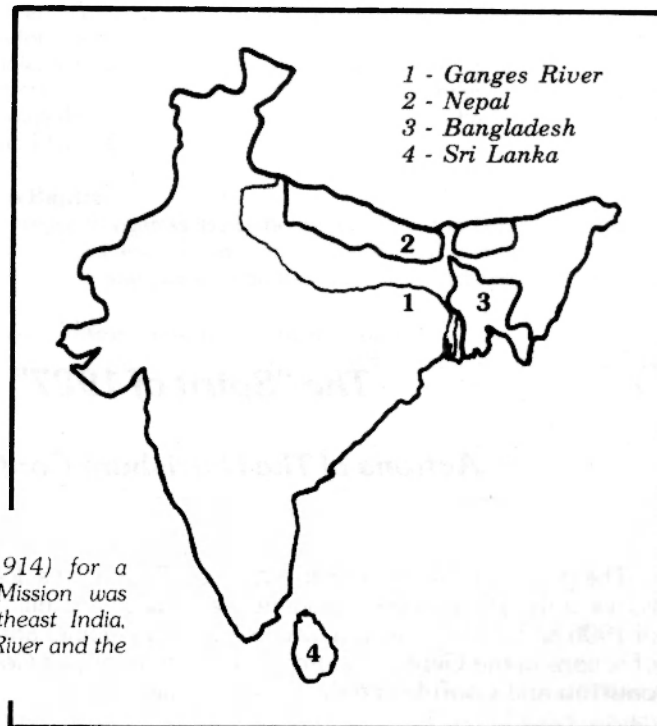

Anti-Mission Sentiment

A continuing concern was the nonparticipation of some sections of the brotherhood in missions. At the 1911 General Conference (Highland, Ohio) a committee had been appointed to give some advice on how to deal with districts that do not encourage foreign missions. Their report brought the following intriguing resolutions:

Sec. 1. Whereas, we find two districts in the Brotherhood which fail to recognize the importance of Foreign Mission work, not being in sympathy with the system and with some of the workers, therefore, it is recommended that the Bishops of the adjoining districts, namely, Rapho, Donegal and Districts of Franklin, PA shall use their influence to effect cooperation between such districts as are not in sympathy to Foreign Mission work and Foreign Missionary work (sic) in the Brotherhood, and
Sec. 2. Resolved, That Mission workers, Home or Foreign, shall exercise wisdom and discretion in their Mission efforts in districts that are not favorably inclined to Mission work.

Beginnings on a Third Continent – India

But, despite pockets of resistance, the missions movement gained increasing momentum. Some people went overseas attaching themselves to other missionary societies, and some went totally independently. It was in this setting that General Conference adopted a resolution to seek to establish a mission in India. The Amos Musser party arrived in India in 1905 and reported to General Conference from their station at Lucknow. This difficult field had also been visited by other BICs as early as 1899. The Musser party returned to America in 1912 and in 1914 Henry and Katie Smith and Effie Rohrer arrived under General Conference appointment. In their search for a field of special need they were assisted by Bishop Mahlon Lapp of the Mennonite church. This resulted in the choice of North Bihar, described in Smith's letter to General Conference as a field "about the size of Lebanon and Lancaster Counties." Here the Brethren in Christ established mission posts at Madhipura and Saharsa. As more workers arrived, their witness spread over the region and at one time were carrying on ministries in Supaul, Barjora, and Monghyr. In India we learned that there was not only danger from tropical diseases but the hazard of flooding by the wild Kosi River which wrought havoc as it changed its course, inundating villages year after year.

In India we also learned that the Gospel not only had to penetrate ignorance and superstition. Long-established religion with millenniums of rigid social structure proved that the Gospel could not penetrate the hearts of the Hindu by the mere telling of the story.

Wherever our missionaries went to share the Good News, it became evident that in Satan they had a formidable adversary. The sending mission boards soon were aware of a need for training. But there was also fear as to what education of the mind of young people might do to their hearts. While many devout Christians felt secure with the timeless Word of Scripture, they had genuine anxiety about 20th Century interpretations of its implications.

The "Spirit of 1907"

Actions of The Harrisburg Conference

The genius of the Brethren in Christ is reflected in its dealings with contemporary issues at the 1907 General Conference. It may be significant that the Conferences of 1906 and 1907 were both held in cities (Des Moines and Harrisburg). A sampling of actions in the General Church Work section of that Conference show a spirit of caution and confidence that has been the hallmark of our movement in its best days.

ART. 10 RE: Politics and Business Relationships

“Resolved, that no question should be raised as to the moral character of the offices in business corporations which are legitimately conducted; nevertheless some offices can be occupied by immoral and untrustworthy individuals, for which reasons we advise the brotherhood to exercise precaution in affiliating in such institutions. Reference: Rom. 13:1, Jn. 17:15, Acts 15th chapter.”

ART. 12 Scripture References for Conference Decisions

“Conference appointed a committee of three brethren to furnish Scriptural references for all Conference decisions bearing on doctrinal points, such references to be spread on the Minutes following decision. Committee: S. G. Engle, H. K. Kreider, A. Z. Hess.”

ART. 14 Women on the Home Mission Board

“Whereas, The work of the Home Mission Board is of great importance, and; therefore, the Board shall be made up of the best material in order to effective work; and Whereas, it appears reasonable that sisters should have a place on the Board as well as brethren

Resolved, That Conference authorize the appointing committee to appoint two or three sisters on the Home Mission Board for this conference year.”

ART. 18 Re: Closed Communion

“A petition to Conference requesting to spread on the Minutes the Scriptural references as a basis for closed communion was considered at length and decided that the church, as a whole, has never really practiced what is generally termed as “closed communion,” but discourages promiscuous communion, and referred the question to the committee appointed to furnish references for Scriptural basis for Conference decisions. Reference: I Corinthians 11:28”

ART. 24 Where to Baptize

“A petition for Conference to express itself whether consistent to baptize in tanks was considered and decided that each District and Mission shall decide for itself by a majority vote as to the time and place of administering the ordinance of baptism.”

ART. 25 Missionary Training Home and Bible School

This remarkable document was prepared by a select committee of 12 brethren represented as follows: Kansas 3, Ohio 3, Pennsylvania 3, Ontario 1, New York 1, Iowa 1.

It is significant that while the stimulus for missions had been historically west of the Pennsylvania line, in this matter, by a very deliberate step-by-step process the Conference decided to locate this vital institution in Pennsylvania near the population center of the brotherhood.

And so, a missionary training home was conceptualized and placed in the heart of a mission field of great potential—the long-established districts of the brotherhood. At this training institution the young people from all over the brotherhood would meet and study and marry. This set in motion long-term results that were to affect the course of the brotherhood. As its impact was felt, it is understandable that three other areas of the brotherhood established training schools (California, Oklahoma, Ontario).

Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria, . . .

The implications of Acts 1:8 continued to get through to our people. Not only were they to take the Gospel to the uttermost parts (Africa and India) and to the large cities (Chicago, Philadelphia, Buffalo, San Francisco, Toronto, Dayton, etc.), but there were nearer places where people needed to be evangelized. Note the appearance of other new missions:

| Ohio Districts | — | Kentucky (1919) |

THE CHURCH GOES TO NEARBY MISSION POINTS

The church established new mission points within a short distance from established Church Districts: (1) Lancaster, (2) Chambersburg, (3) Altoona, (4) Welland, (5) Kentucky, (6) Virginia.

Some of these new ventures grew into substantial congregations—others developed into fields (Kentucky and Virginia, and the mountains of Pennsylvania).

This process continued to happen throughout the period between World War I (1914-18) and World War II (1939-45). During this period the emergence of State Councils brought focus to regional concerns and visions. The Home Mission Board administered the new areas, usually picking up the responsibility for works growing out of the local people's mission vision.

Growing Influence of General Boards

The growing influence of the two Mission Boards in the life of the brotherhood is symbolized by the appearance of the HANDBOOK OF MISSIONS in 1918. Through this new medium the Boards had a direct access into every home in the brotherhood. The General Conference continued to carry the full responsibility for everything that was done. The cost of the Handbook was covered from the treasury of the Conference rather than from the treasuries of the Mission Boards which received all their funds by voluntary contribution.

Inevitably, more and more of the Mission Boards' business never got to the General Conference floor. This set the stage for occasional problems. One such surfaced in 1925. Certain applicants to the Foreign Mission Board, after presenting their call, "received but slight recognition and no satisfaction as to their acceptance by the Board, and are not satisfied to labour under such suspense."

The request that General Conference provide some way by which applicants could be given satisfaction was sustained and considered in conjunction with some recommendations offered jointly by the General Executive Board and the Foreign Mission Board. These two boards took this occasion to present General Conference with their assessment of the state of the home church. The essence of those preambles was that the church in too many places was not growing normally. The report concluded with these words,

"The above Preambles suggested by the board, if properly worked out will solve the above named problem, in opening doors for those who desire to labor. Strengthening the home base is the only solution to the extension of the Foreign work."

General Conference appointed a committee of five to study the problems embodied in the petitions and recommendations. This committee brought a proposal to the 1926 General Conference that a Board on Church Extension be established made up of one representative from each of the major boards of the church. This recommendation was provisionally adopted including some rather fundamental change in the local leadership of the church. Much of the proposal, however, after being on the minutes for one year, was rejected by the Conference of 1927. In place of an Extension Board, some of the more manageable concerns were assigned to the Home Mission Board and the more difficult parts of the proposal were buried in 1928 when a motion to make the Church Extension Board permanent was lost.

Home Mission Board Handles Concerns for Growth

The appearance of new place names on the roster of delegates to General Conference included mission points scattered across the brotherhood. Many of these were points within a hundred miles or so of established districts. Note the following:

MICHIGAN—Mooretown (1911), Gladwin (1925), Detroit (1938), Oak Grove (1938)
ONTARIO—Houghton (1931)
IOWA—Dallas Center (1929)
SASKATCHEWAN—Paddockwood (1934)
ILLINOIS—Franklin Corners (1938)
CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA—Center County Mission (1921), Iron Springs (1926),
Granville (1929), Saxton (1932), Clear Creek (1934),
Riddlesburg (1937)
EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA—Stowe (1938)

The Home Mission Board also was called in to give administrative and sometimes financial assistance to congregations with special needs. These included: Clearview, Sask. (1927); Valley Chapel, OH (1938); Clay Center, KS (1939); Waynesboro, PA (1939).

Some points were served in locations widely isolated from the brotherhood: Oakley, CA (1921); Boston, MA (1921); Arcadia, FL (1926); Orlando, FL (1929).

The appearance of new names in the school yearbooks—Messiah's CLARION, Beulah's (Upland) ECHO, Jabbok's STAR and Ontario Bible School's (Niagara Christian College) TORCH—signaled a profound new reality in the life of the Brethren in Christ. Students with Swiss-German names were studying side by side with the Carlsons, Collinses, Arnolds, and many others. More and more of this vigorous new blood appeared on the rolls of both Home and Foreign Missions candidates.

The vision for service promoted at Beulah College (Upland College) is reflected in the careers of the seven graduates of the class of '43. Two served in India, two in Africa and one in Navajoland.

World War II Brings New Exposure to the World

World War II brought profound changes to the church. In addition to the difficult question of the Christian's place in society as it attempts to settle problems by warfare, there was also a new exposure to the world and its needs. Many young men, and some of their wives, were transplanted to places away from the church. In these experiences they tested their own faith and discovered other Christian groups on a level which had never really happened before. When the war was over people were ready to go into Christian service at points of need around the world. Some were going to existing mission fields; some were serving with the Mennonite Central Committee in helping to clean up neglected spots that had suffered death and destruction in the war.

A New Field Considered— The Philippines

The new awareness of Christ's call to compassionate ministry was in harmony with the Gospel as the Brethren in Christ knew it. The Foreign Mission Board in 1947 decided to send its chairman, R. I. Witter, along with Jesse W. Hoover, Editor of the EVANGELICAL VISITOR and Brethren in Christ representative to MCC, for a survey of possible mission work in the Philippines. At the time, the MCC had a unit in the Philippines of nearly 20 persons of whom about a third were Brethren in Christ. This study led the Foreign Mission Board to decide against opening a field in that newly independent country.

Japan – A New Kind of Mission

A few years later the Board brought a proposal to General Conference to establish a new mission field in Japan, a highly developed nation picking itself up after the upheavals of World War II. Entering this field in 1953 were missionaries of the new generation seeking to communicate the message of Christ to a people who were culturally advanced and highly literate. Now the church began to discover that mission work is primarily communicating God's message. The traditionally understood needs of healing the sick, teaching people to read, and feeding the hungry were not prominent in post-war Japan by the time our workers arrived. But there was another hunger that was deep and pervasive in post-war Japan. The Gospel we know was Good News for this people.

The first location in Western Honshu was in the northern coastal town of Hagi, and then Nagato. Although growth was slow, other points of witness led to clusters of believers in a number of towns in Yamaguchi Province. In the early 1970s a Brethren in Christ Fellowship organized with representation from Hagi, Nagato, Takibe, Shimonoseki and Nishiichi.

The establishment of ministry in Tokyo, one of the world's largest cities, was predicated on a number of factors: (a) the receptivity of people [newly relocated from their traditional homes to the urban milieu]; (b) a place of contract for believers from the provinces when they relocate in the city; and (c) a place for missionaries to have available educational opportunities for their children. The wisdom of this decision is validated by the growth and vitality of Christian fellowship of the Koganei congregation in northwest Tokyo. Several other locations in Tokyo are developing as points of witness and mission.

JAPANESE MEN IN STUDY

Rapid Growth of African Mission Program

Post-World War II was a period of great expansion of the mission programs in Africa. A strong corps of qualified missionaries developed programs designed to meet the needs and aspirations of the emerging Ndebele and Tonga peoples.

Development of institutional ministries was made possible by the government's educational policies in providing grants for teachers' salaries. Since the missionary staff was nonsalaried, substantial amounts of their earnings were available for program development. Similar policies regarding health services allowed for funding for those programs. The major capital development, however, was made possible through the grants of European-based philanthropic organizations.

By this process of capitalizing on resources beyond the North American brotherhood, the primary contribution from the home church was in providing strong leadership to train and organize the emerging church. As self-determination gained momentum across Africa, what was once a Federation within the British Commonwealth of Nations, became three separate countries, each going separate ways politically. The Brethren in Christ Church of Africa, while moving toward its own indigenous goals, found itself in two nations going in opposite directions politically. Its inherited understanding of transnational brotherhood made it seem unnecessary at first to separate. However, the growing problems between white-ruled Rhodesia in the south and black-ruled Zambia in the north made it evident that the churches should effect an administrative separation, which was accomplished in 1973.

The training programs for church leaders at the Bible Institutes in both countries worked at the goal of training pastors and administrators. In both cases some of the most gifted leaders went into professional careers in education and government. Some of this talent remained committed to the church although the development at the local village church level suffered from the constant talent drain.

Developments of the mid-1970s in both Rhodesia and Zambia point to the importance of nurture in the local church. New efforts in training of local pastors and lay leaders through Theological Education by Extension have been given increased priority.

The conflict between the disenfranchised majority and the government of Rhodesia has exposed the Rhodesian church in Matabeleland to severe testing. Its suffering at this time is made more personal to us in North America because of our understanding of the body of Christ.

In Zambia, the year 1978 represents a major step on the road to that Brethren in Christ fellowship becoming a self-propagating body. The consecration of Bishop William Silungwe on January 8 signals an era of new partnership relationships with the North American church.

Brotherhood Finally Discovers Latin America

Cuba-Nicaragua

H. Frances Davidson had expressed concern about evangelization among the people of South and Central America before the decision to start a mission in South Central Africa. This concern was not deep enough to gain the attention of the brotherhood until the post-World War II era. By then, Brethren in Christ farmers on the East and West Coasts had made contact with Spanish-speaking laborers in their tomato fields and fruit groves. But it was from several evangelistic campaigns in Cuba that the church became involved in an organized mission effort. By a General Conference action in 1954, the Foreign Mission Board was authorized to assume full responsibility for the work begun by the Cuban Committee. This work progressed—until the missionaries, Howard and Pearl Wolgemuth, were forced to leave in 1960 following the political upheavals in that Caribbean nation.

With the closing of doors to an active missions program in Cuba, the Board for World Missions conducted studies from which grew the decision to launch a new mission in Nicaragua, in 1965, astride the Central American isthmus. Nicaragua has proved to be a ripe harvest field. The responsiveness of the people in the villages south of the capital city of Managua has been matched by their eagerness to share the Good News with others.

Although isolated from the North American church for 15 years, two visits by a BFM representative in 1976 and 1978 have reestablished a bond of Christian fellowship to a church that clearly maintains its identity as Brethren in Christ and is registered officially with the Cuban government in that name.

A country with oppressive climate, Nicaragua has proved a stressful environment for quite a number of the missionaries. It has been of special significance that the local church members have been the primary resource for relieving the work load of missionaries and carrying forward aggressive evangelism in adjoining communities.

The first congregations—Esquipulas, Arroyo, and Schick—have become sending bases for establishing new congregations at Ticuantepe, Santo Domingo, Nindiri and Monte Horeb. Bello Horizonte, on the eastern side of Managua, is a work among the urban middle class.

During the past year the church is establishing new bases of outreach around the northern rim of huge Lake Nicaragua to the east. Two of the latest developments there are at Juigalpa and Boaco.

Amid signs of political instability the church is going about its task of discipling believers and translating its faith into life that speaks—in praise to God and in witness to the world.

In India – A Church

After Sixty Years A Mission

Furthest along on the road to self-identity is the church in India. Having faced political uncertainties for thirty years, it has needed to discover its identity as a Christian community amid diversity and many limiting circumstances.

While its first forty years showed very limited growth, a gracious moving of the Spirit among the Santal and Oraon Christians during the past twenty years in the Banmankhi and Purnea areas brought into being a church that has the resources for growth and witness. (See Hoke, EACH ONE WIN ONE.)

With the awareness that government policy could force the withdrawal of foreign missionary personnel at any time, the Board for Missions through its field personnel set about organizing the church and preparing its leaders to manage its own affairs. This deliberate policy was carried out progressively until in 1974 there remained no mission structure. By 1975 the last missionary couple working directly with the church returned to North America. Since that time the remaining missionaries working within the country of India have made periodic fraternal and counseling visits to the church.

The church in America continues to give some assistance to the India church, working entirely through its elected officers. It is open to share in a continuing supportive way as doors are open to do that. Under the Spirit's guidance the church in America stands ready to participate with the India church in evangelism and church growth activities and in development projects.

Fields At Home

Ministerial licenses were authorized by General Conference to be issued by the Home Mission Board in 1925. Thus opened new opportunities for the development of the gifts of young men for the ministry of the church.

During the Great Depression of the 1930s a revival in the mountains of central Pennsylvania set in motion a visitation of the Spirit to many communities. The roster of stations on the Home Missions recommendations to General Conference chronicles this interesting chapter of Brethren in Christ church growth: Saxton (1932), Ground Hog Valley ('34), Clear Creek and Ray's Cove ('34), Shermans Valley ('36), Riddlesburg ('37), Canoe Creek ('38), Friend's Cove ('38), Blandburg ('39), Rainesburg ('39), Janesville ('40), Batesville ('47), New Castle ('49), Three Springs ('53), Mt. Etna ('57).

In eastern Pennsylvania the Stowe Mission was first listed in 1938 and continued under Mission Board administration until 1953.

Other new churches that had Home Mission Board assistance include: Llewellyn ('44), Liberty Valley (Saville) ('45), Hunlock Creek ('49), Blairs Mills ('50), Tremont ('51), Sunnyside Chapel ('54), Searights ('55), Little Marsh (Jemison Valley) ('57).

Another field born out of the vision of the church in Ohio was Kentucky. Beginning with evangelistic meetings about the close of World War I, the Home Mission Board first listed Kentucky in 1919. This work became the training ground for many Christian workers over the years. Mission points or place names in the Kentucky field include: Garlin (Beulah Chapel), Fairview (Ella), Home Evangel, Knifley (Gospel Hall), Grassy Springs, Evangel Chapel, Bloomington, Millerfields. For some years a medical clinic was operated at Knifley.

From Kentucky it was a short leap of vision to see a harvest in Tennessee. The first mission point on Brethren in Christ lists was at DeRossett (1956) followed by Smithville (1963) and McMinnville (1966).

In Virginia a work began in the Sylvatus area in 1918 which came to be known as Bethel. Later a work at Farris Mines (Allisonia) was developed. This community contributed a number of pastors to the church. In the 1950s a Brethren in Christ ministry began at Adney Gap and Callaway.

Two mission points in Florida, Arcadia (1926) and Orlando (1929), received help from the brotherhood through the Mission Board. Of these, Orlando has continued to today as an Extension Church.

In northern Ohio a mission was opened in Massillon and listed on the Home Mission's roster in 1947. Later ministries were developed at Shanesville (1950) and Uniontown (1952).

The Houghton Mission in Ontario, first appearing in 1931, also had congregational developments at Frogmore and Walsingham Center.

A pioneering ministry in northern Ontario at Virginiatown (1966) led to a vision for a Brethren in Christ church planting there.

In the northwest, the work was first assisted by the Home Mission Board in 1933. For a time the work was in charge of Mabel Climenhaga until a pastor was assigned. This work, featured imaginatively for the brotherhood as North Star Mission, for a time had ministries at Meath Park, Howard Creek, and Paddockwood.

In the far west, pioneer B. M. Books was instrumental in opening up two Brethren in Christ outposts in Oregon. The Grants Pass work was listed in 1945 and Salem, at Labish Village, appeared in 1955.

Other new ventures were in Albuquerque, NM (1950), Sheboygan, WI (1959) and these places in southern Pennsylvania: Hanover (1955), Mt. Holly Springs (1958), Red Lion (1961). In Michigan the Board gave assistance to Oak Grove (1958), Gladwin (intermittent) and Hillman (1961). It also responded for assistance to Red Star, OK (1950) and Ringgold, MD (1955). Relatively short ministries were sponsored at Los Angeles, CA (1955), Huron, CA (1956) and Broadway, VA (1959).

Changing Emphases

The Brethren in Christ have always sought to be people of the Word, seeking to be obedient to its teachings as they understood it. It was in this context that the freedoms of the early 1900s broke out across the brotherhood. There is no evidence, however, that the Committee to provide Scripture references for Conference decisions was active during the 1925-28 Conferences when the concerns for leadership occupied prominent attention.

Some nagging concerns within the brotherhood surfaced again in the years following World War II. From growing contacts with the wider Christian community the denomination's association with the Mennonite Central Committee (1943), the Christian Holiness Association (1950), and the National Association of Evangelicals (1949), we began to get new input which had impact on our methods and perspective in missions endeavors. We came to have a growing concern for how we were perceived by those outside our fellowship. Simultaneously, a growing number of Brethren in Christ leaders were used significantly in leadership roles in evangelical organizations.

The post-war period saw a marked increase in the number of persons assigned in missions both overseas and in North America. Because of their deployment around the world, these church servants could never all meet together. There were, however, several Mission Worker Retreats to which most of the North American workers and those furloughing from overseas attended. One such historic event is captured on the photograph on the next page.

Volunteerism in Missions

An important new resource to staffing missions programs were persons offering themselves in voluntary service. The Home Missions Board brought this to the attention of General Conference in 1949. These persons, while frequently performing significant service, were responding to needs without the more traditional sense of call. The process of assignment was adapted so that persons could be approved and sent to their assignments without waiting for an approving action of General Conference. This increased flexibility was particularly convenient to institutional programs.

Mission programs changed in character when large staffs were available to them. Programs could be expanded and sometimes levels of expertise became available that could not have been financed otherwise. It also made institutional programs less dependent on local resources.

Places where large numbers of volunteers shared in Missions programs since 1950 are: Rhodesia, Zambia, Navajo Mission, San Francisco Mission, New York (Bronx and Brooklyn), Montreal Lake Children's Home and Japan.

One hundred forty-nine Brethren in Christ volunteers also served with the Mennonite Central Committee in 29 countries around the world.

The historical listing of personnel (beginning on p. 43) includes 670 volunteers.

Missions to Sub-Cultures

It might appear to those who study us that we Brethren in Christ were a subculture. But a study of our response to the Great Commission would indicate that our self-consciousness about cultural patterns is in inverse proportion to the freedom we find in Christ. Those who are made free by the Son are free indeed (John 8:36). Our effectiveness, therefore, in communicating the Good News is in direct relationship to the freedom we know.

In this context it is useful to look at the Brethren in Christ ministry to subcultures. It would appear that we had no strong urges toward such groups—and this was probably because we were unaware of them. As we did meet people on the outside, we were more aware of their sinfulness than of their being disadvantaged. Only after we had some of our people living close enough to feel their plight did we begin to suffer with them. Note these examples:

— to Skid Row

While each of our city missions had some contact with homeless men, it was our missions in San Francisco and Detroit that did much to bring this severe problem to our consciousness as a people. Over the years the stream of needy persons has continued to turn to the Life Line Mission for relief. For some, it became the place at which they experienced the transforming power of Christ in their lives. By the very nature of this ministry it is impossible to calculate the results—but testimonies from afar bear witness to its having been a lifesaving station.

MEN EATING AT LIFE LINE MISSION

— to Native Americans

There is very little evidence that the Brethren in Christ were preoccupied with the needs of those earliest Americans who spoke no Pennsylvania Dutch. In the stirrings of the 1880s there was concern for the people then living in the "Indian Territory" but this concern seems to have gotten lost "in committee."

Some individuals became deeply involved with those native Americans who were their neighbors, but there was no brotherhood response until 1945 when the Home Mission Board assigned Lynn and Eleanor Nicholson to New Mexico to establish a ministry to the Navajos. This led to a ministry to a large community of off-reservation Navajos. From its beginnings the program was aimed at meeting apparent needs—educational—medical—spiritual. As rapport was established in the community, there was some response on the part of those Navajos who saw in the lives of missionaries the love and concern they spoke about.

Because the Navajo Mission was institutional in program, a rather large staff of volunteers was needed, creating a training ground for many people of the church. (The historical listing shows 186 who served at the Navajo Mission.)

In 1969 General Conference authorized the Board for Missions to assume responsibility (in cooperation with interested Mennonite groups in Saskatchewan) for the Montreal Lake Children's Home at Timber Bay, Saskatchewan. This program operates a hostel for Indian and Metis children who attend a government school nearby. The staff of the Home, plus local community people, share in the spiritual ministries there.

— to Ethnic Minorities

Two black families who were worshipping in a Brethren in Christ congregation in southcentral Pennsylvania moved to Brooklyn, New York in 1958. It was concern for these believers that led the Brethren in Christ to Brooklyn, New York. Pilgrim Chapel is, in 1978, the only totally black congregation in the brotherhood.

There are, however, a number of congregations where there are significant ethnic groups. In Bronx, New York there is a growing congregation of people with black, Puerto Rican, Chinese, and Caucasian backgrounds. Located in a community that has close access to these various groups, the Fellowship Chapel ministry is at one of the cutting edges of the church.

Most of the response to ethnic minorities through the Mission Board has been in recent years. In two cities where there were rapid movements of population in the '50s and '60s (Detroit and Chicago), our congregations did not survive as a ministering community.

In Labish Village on the outskirts of Salem, Oregon, a congregation has ministered to a community of changing ethnic backgrounds. Originally the home of Japanese-American produce farmers, it became, after World War II, the home of rather mobile Chicano, white, and black families. In 1972 a service team, known as Labish Tentmakers, moved into the village to share in its life and to assist the small congregation there.

Located in the lower Rio Grande valley of South Texas, Pharr is a border town where many Spanish-Americans, lately of Mexico, are working in the local ranches. Several families from Pennsylvania settled in Pharr and began a ministry on both sides of the U.S.—Mexico border. For several years the Midwest Conference shared in the ministry in Pharr and then requested the Board for Missions to share in the administration of this program. Fortunately, team leader LeRoy Eberly is proficient in the Spanish language which is essential for work in this area.

In the 1970s the Board for Missions took beginning steps to find ways for the Brethren in Christ to reenter the cities which we, along with most of mid-America, had been abandoning for some years. A major step through its new Department of Urban Ministries was to participate with two evangelical black groups in Philadelphia with both funds and personnel. This model of ministry presents new opportunities to a people concerned with faithfulness.

Beginnings in Church Extension

When the newly-created Board for Home Missions and Extension revamped the strategy for missions advance in the late 1950s, the Church Extension program was born. Unlike the abortive appearance of that word “extension” in 1926, the church rallied to a plan to establish new congregations in each of the regional conferences. With the establishment of the innovative extension loan funds, money was available for the building of churches as the beginning step in the new program. It was soon learned, however, that to have a building before there is a congregation presented some fundamental problems. Although courageous pastors were recruited to lead these programs, they were immediately saddled with excessive financial obligations. While the brotherhood provided subsidies ostensibly to aid in the operational budgets, the amortization of capital indebtedness became a heavy burden for the fledgling congregations.

By the time General Conference completed the merger of the two Mission Boards and the Peace, Relief and Service Committee in 1966, it became apparent that certain adjustments were necessary to help the first group of Extension Churches. Guidelines were established calling for an agreed-upon pastor to lead a new project and an acceptable capital funding program before the Board for Missions would approve new projects.

With the valiant and imaginative efforts of the Regional Extension Boards, the debt situation was gotten into manageable limits so that each congregation could move forward. Following is the complete list of extension projects to which the brotherhood has contributed through the Mission Board:

FUTURE PROJECTIONS

What of the future?

Our concern for obedience gives us perspective. We look to the Word and then we look to the world. From the WORD we find the timeless charge to go. We also note that the ideas and plans of disciples are tempered and refined by the Holy Spirit. Our brotherhood pattern of counseling together to make decisions puts us in a good position for the Holy Spirit to work.

As we come to the Grantham Conference we are blessed with all the diversity of a growing discipleship. Among us are the hesitant Peters (Acts 10) and the strategizing Pauls (Acts 16). The tendency of the Brethren in Christ to scatter has enabled our Philips (Acts 8) to encounter new opportunities. We have our Aquilas and Priscillas (Acts 18). We have churches that are similar to Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia and Laodicea (Rev. 2, 3). We have Barnabases (Acts 4, 9, 11, 13, 15) and we have Silases (Acts 16), John Marks (Acts 15), and Timothys (Acts 16) as well as all the diversity represented in the eleven (Acts 1), Justus and Matthias (Acts 1), the 120 (Acts 1), the 3,000 (Acts 2) and the 5,000 (Acts 4).

As was true of the early church, our experiences of the past do not give us formulas for the uncertainties of the future. But as we move along, the Spirit speaks to us both individually and as a group.

Unlike the early church, we have relatively more wealth than we need to sustain ourselves. They had enough resources to grow; we have more than enough. But the primary resource now, as then, is people—people willing to go.

At the 1978 General Conference the church will be testing its voices. There has been growing concern that we have been too preoccupied with church maintenance and development concerns to hear the new calls to new ministries. Our understanding of the Scriptures is that God calls and the church sends. Our experience of the past two centuries confirms that this same pattern applies to the Brethren in Christ. The Board, with broad consultation across the brotherhood during the 1976-78 biennium, has shared some guiding principles it believes will be helpful in coming to new decisions. (See 1977 Yearbook, pp. 17-24.)

The Board accepts the soundness of the strategy of the Apostle Paul to work with the resources of people and gifts in the area to which we have already gone. This has led to active consideration of areas of need just beyond the perimeters of present Brethren in Christ witness around the world.

The History Of
Brethren in Christ Missions
A Time Line Chart

A Task Force assigned by the Board will bring proposals to the Conference. They will present options primarily relating to method of entry into new ministries. Some factors to be considered are:

- 1) Partnership with overseas churches which desire to initiate new outreach. The North American church will be willing to participate in whatever way(s) that true mutuality can be beneficial (persons, finances, expertise).
- 2) The established criteria for discovering new ministries of fields may in some circumstances cause the sending church to enter that ministry independent of any of the overseas Brethren in Christ churches.
- 3) It is seen as timely that the Brethren in Christ are open to the possibility of working with other inter-church groups of which we are members.
- 4) In order to use the personnel resources available within the church who may not find adequate expression in other options, the Board will be open to consider sharing persons with other organizations already at work in a particular field or ministry.

Two principles to be applied as these priorities emerge are: (1) We are committed to a holistic ministry (meeting needs of the whole person) with emphasis on evangelism, and (2) we see the necessity of using a variety of methods in meeting particular needs of particular groups to which the Spirit leads us. (For example: meeting food needs may, in the future, become as important as meeting medical needs has been in the past.)

It is understood that, in light of the present circumstances of the brotherhood, more than one anticipated ministry could be further researched and/or implemented simultaneously. The Board will ask General Conference for the privilege of reordering priorities as warranted upon discovery of additional information and/or changing circumstances. All of this will be done on behalf of the church which will do the sending of its commissioned representatives into the fields and ministries to which God calls us.

What about the brotherhood's present wide-ranging missions ministries? The Board speaks to the 1978 Conference in these words, "We, the Brethren in Christ, want to be obedient to the Divine Mandate for tasks already begun and new assignments into which the Holy Spirit will lead us." It is the expressed goal of the Board to continue to share with young churches within the principles of mutuality (II Cor. 8), with the understanding that the bonds of our relationships are growing in strength and changing in character. We will share missionaries and persons with special skills and such funds as are available to help them accomplish their goals. This mutuality will also make possible a unique sharing from the gifts of the young churches with the established churches

The Apostle Paul looked on the fields and saw beyond his reach. Although he never quite caught up with his vision, the churches he helped to establish took the Gospel far beyond Spain. The Brethren in Christ are making decisions in 1978 that will either aid or hinder that same process.

Historical Listing of Mission Workers

The Gospel of Christ has always been shared by people who have received it. From the beginnings of the Brethren in Christ movement we have been aware of the command to go. Many have gone.

On the following pages are the names of persons who served under assignment of one of the Mission Boards of the General Conference, since 1878. Accuracy is dependent upon existing records. A number of former mission workers, both home and overseas, have made major contribution in checking the list.

Information on these 1,734 persons is arranged as follows:

NAMES—Listed alphabetically by surname, husbands and wives listed together;

Married name used when known, as well as given name.

DATES—Dates used are taken from official records—GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES, HANDBOOKS OF MISSIONS, and Missions Directories;

Corrections to former records are included, as verified.

PLACES OF SERVICE—Overseas assignments are identified by country only;

Little attempt was made to indicate length of service at each place;

Assignments are identified in churches for only the period in which that unit was under Mission Board supervision.

Since the Brethren in Christ church is a constituent member of the Mennonite Central Committee, all persons who served under MCC appear as designated. Quite a number of persons served both under MCC and one of the Mission Boards.

Only eternity will reveal the results of the labors of these 1,734 persons. As has always been the case, today's workers—as well as those who will be sent tomorrow—share the Gospel as we, the Brethren in Christ, know it.

THE GOOD NEWS

AS DEPICTED BY THE BRETHREN IN CHRIST EMBLEM

The CROSS depicts God's free gift of salvation, available to us through Jesus Christ's death and resurrection. This new life comes as we repent of our sins and walk in obedience to the revealed will of God, even when it means personal cost, sacrifice and suffering.

Today God is preparing His Church, composed of all those of every nation who through saving faith in Christ have entered into spiritual union with Him.

For Brethren in Christ, the DOVE has dual symbolism. It reminds us that as Christians we are called to be peacemakers, rejecting force and working for reconciliation. Christ brings a spirit of gentleness, longsuffering and forgiveness to replace hatred, violence and vengeance.

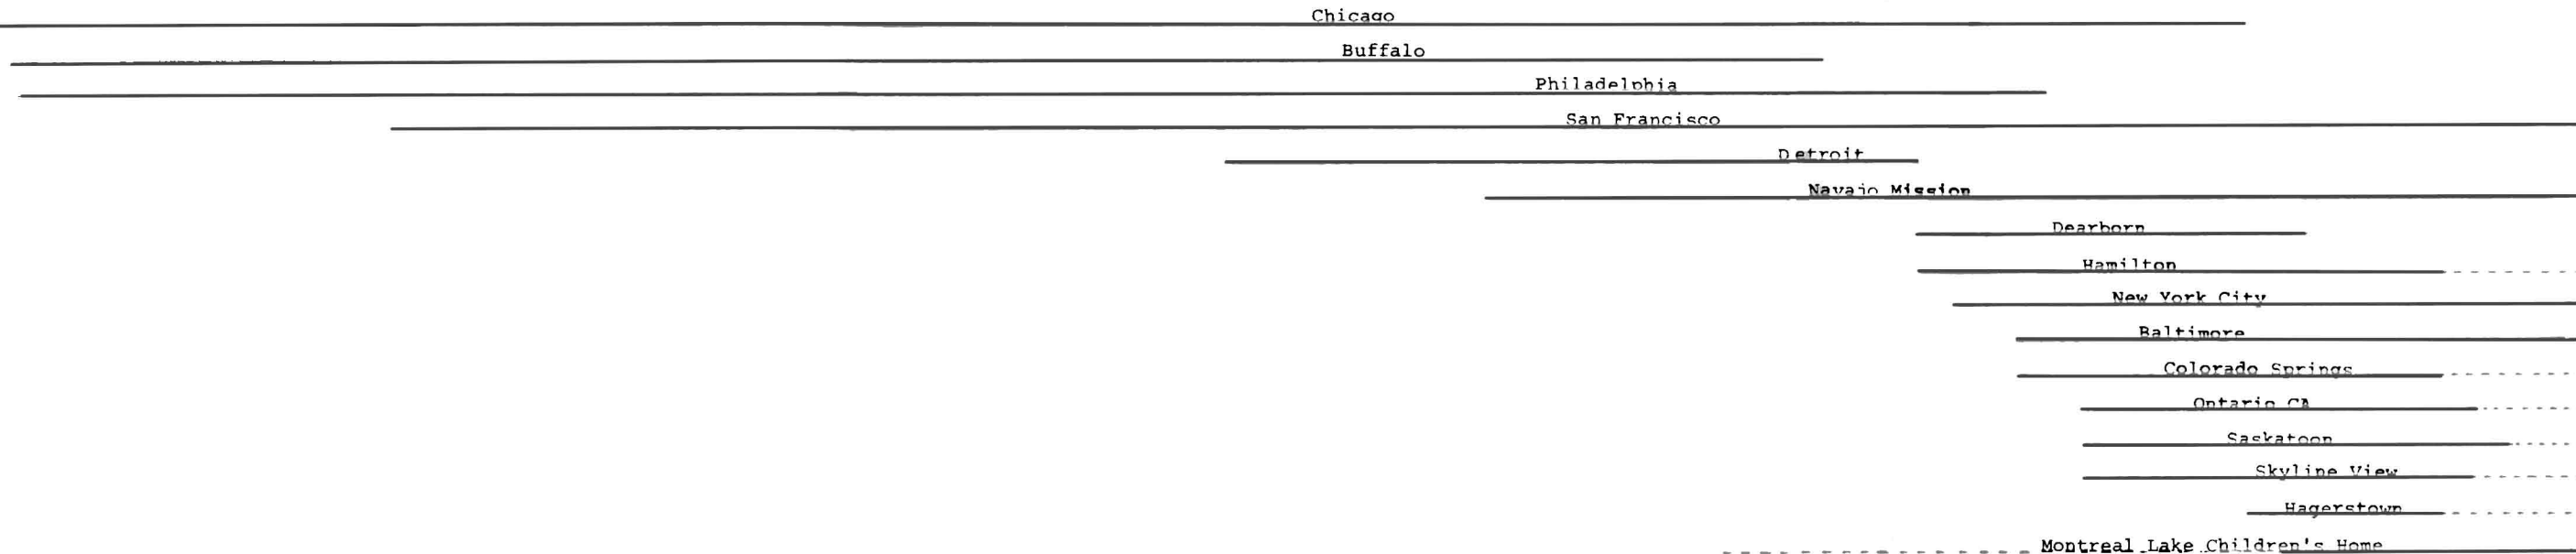

The dove also represents the Holy Spirit, who guides and empowers the believer in the daily life of Christian discipleship. He enables us to live a new life of holiness and obedience to God and to show love and goodwill to others.

The BASIN AND TOWEL remind us that our Lord responded to the needs of those around him. He said, "The son of man is come, not to be served, but to serve and to give his life for many...." As his disciples, we are called to a life of selfless service—to fellow believers and to those who have not yet acknowledged Him as Savior.

We are called to live responsibly, sharing daily those blessings we have received from Him. He commissions us to share both "the cup of cold water" and the "Living Water."
